A NON-SECTARIAN ARMISTICE DAY SERVICE

By Rabbi Ferdinand M. Isserman.

Since the publication of my open letter to Mayor Foster, urging that the Armistice Day Services at the Cenotaph be non-sectarian in nature, many have endorsed the idea. General Gunn in a public statement pointed out that the Canadian Legion was also endeavouring to establish such a service. Surely no one can controvert the principle that a municipal service in honour of the war dead be one in which all faiths represented by the soldiers should participate. All that is now needed is a practical application of the principle. Mayor Foster is endeavouring to work that out. He should succeed. Non-sectarian armistice services have been successfully held in many communities, and Toronto should prove no exception.

$125,000—THE MINIMUM

The Federation of Jewish Philanthropies, which is planning to launch its campaign for funds shortly, must raise its objective of $125,000 if it is to carry on its activities. In the past year the Federation spent about $95,000, of which but $70,000 was collected, leaving a deficit of $25,000. If the $125,000 is raised, it will merely mean that current expenses will be met and the deficit covered. It will mean that there will be no opportunity for expansion. Those familiar with Federation are aware of the inadequacy of its present work. All of our organizations are anaemic from want of funds. None of them has the funds to do its work in accordance with modern progressive social service concepts. All our institutions must expand if they are to face the problems which confront them. Such expansion is impossible without more funds. In Toronto the Jewish community has done the minimum in its social programme. The raising of $125,000 will merely mean that it will be possible to continue the minimum. $150,000 should have been the campaign objective.

But even $125,000 will not be secured unless most of the present members of Federation increase their subscriptions from fifty to seventy-five per cent. There are undoubtedly many who should raise them even more than that. This must be faced—unless there are very substantial increases in contributions the objective cannot be attained.

The Jewish community raises more proportionately than the rest of the community. Even our $95,000 budget of last year compares very favourably with that of any other groups in our community. But our problem is greater. There are more Jewish poor—there are more situations to meet due to the adjustments inevitable in an immigrant community. But shall we complain about these additional burdens? Shall we not rather rejoice and thank God that the persecution and humiliation of the Ghetto are gone, that here in a free country there are glorious opportunities of which many have taken advantage. What of it if we need more for our charities? It merely means that we must raise more money. There are few who truly deny themselves to give to charity. Most men give of their surplus. They deny themselves few luxuries and certainly no necessities because of their gifts to the poor.

THE JERUSALEM UNIVERSITY REPRESENTATION AT THE TORONTO UNIVERSITY CENTENARY

At the centenary celebration held at Toronto University last week evidence was given of the special appreciation of the message received from the Jewish University at Jerusalem.

Toronto University has shown its interest in the new Palestine institution, before when it graciously sent a delegation to Jerusalem to participate in the opening ceremonies of the University there. It is gratifying to know that the Jewish University has already had an opportunity in a measure to return the compliment.

May we suggest that the Zionist authorities would have been better advised to have bestowed the honour of representing the Jewish academic interests at the academic function here upon some individual more closely associated with academic pursuits than the person who was selected for the task? The Jerusalem University is the property and the pride of the Jewish people as a whole. In choosing a spokesman it should have endeavoured to fall in line with the atmosphere and spirit of the occasion. It was not incumbent upon it to restrict itself to Canadian talent. There is a group of Jewish scientists in New York particularly interested in giving assistance to the Palestine University. Some distinguished member of this group, such as Dr. Libman, would have added his personal lustre to that of the institution to be represented. There are also a considerable number of Jewish scholars occupying major positions on staffs of various universities who are at the same time affiliated with Zionist activities, and any one of these would have the academic qualifications to appear and mingle in academic circles with ease and credit to his principal. We need only mention the names of such men as Professor Gottheil, Professor Horace Kallen, Professor Frankfurter, Dr. Chaim Chernowitz, Professor Wolfsohn and Professor Friedenwold to illustrate the type of people we mean.

However, the choice of the representative was only an incident. The significant feature of the occasion was the fact that the Jewish University is gaining recognition as an educational factor among sister universities. In recognizing the University the academic world is showing its appreciation of the forces in Jewish life which are bringing about the renaissance of the Jewish spirit.

DR. MAGNESS

The Jews of America are extending a hearty welcome to Dr. Jehudah Magness, the dean of the Hebrew University, on his return to America for a short visit. Dr. Magness is one of the finest personalities produced by American Jewry. He is one of the rare individuals who take their ideals and professions seriously and endeavour to translate them into life, regardless of the sacrifices entailed.

Dr. Magness commenced his public career as rabbi in the wealthiest temple in New York. A remarkable orator, he soon won a dominating position in the life of the community. But he was sincere. He realized that a minister in a wealthy temple cannot remain independent, he must cater to the wishes of the influential members. And he realized that sermonic Judaism was hollow. He wished to enter into closer contact with the vital springs of

COMMENTARIES

By Rabbi Harry J. Stern, of Montreal
Associate Contributing Editor

Dr. Pereira Mendes

We have been spending some little time with Dr. Pereira Mendes, who is on a visit to Montreal. He came on from New York to have "the mitzvah," as he puts it, to officiate once more at the historic Spanish and Portuguese Synagogue on Stanley Street. To know Dr. Mendes is to love him. He is amiable, scholarly, aristocratic and, above all, sympathetic with everything that tends to perpetuate "Yiddishkeit." We know of few men who have been more active than this Sephardic Rabbi in the cause of the Klal Yisroel. He espoused the cause of Jew and Judaism in England. At the very first congresses of the Zionist movement he pleaded for a religio-national interpretation of Zionism. He journeyed to the West Indies and there was instrumental in bringing back to Judaism many of the old Spanish Jewish families who had forsaken the faith. Though observant and Orthodox, this venerable Rabbi counts among his devoted friends some of the most radical reform rabbis. In our conversations Dr. Mendes always underscored one thought, which we offer to the readers of the REVIEW: "The Portuguese Jewish Congregation is of such historic significance for Canadian Jewry that some effort ought to be made by the general Jewish community to maintain the She'erith Isroel." We do wonder what our men of affairs think about it.

"A Goy Talmud Chochom"

To the Talmudic students of Pressburg and Slabdka, New York and everywhere, we suggest a study of Professor Moore's monumental work, "Judaism in the First Century of the Christian Era." It is the first time that a non-Jewish scholar has written a work on the Talmud with complete objectivity and freedom from dogmatism. Heretofore non-Jews were lost in "the Sea of the Talmud." Even such conscientious Christian scholars as Schürer and Strack approached their Talmudic studies with a "Tendenz." Not so with Professor Moore. He is only concerned with the truth, and in search for the truth he goes to the sources of Jewish literature. As we peruse the two volumes we marvel at the Hebraic knowledge of this non-Jew. We know of no Jewish scholar who contributed such a comprehensive treatment of Judaism of the first century of the Christian era.

Where are our Jewish scholars? We who boast about the knowledge of the Torah may in all humility turn to this Goy Talmud Chochom and study Hagaddah and Halacha.

The Union of American Hebrew Congregations

When it comes to the promotion of organized Judaism in America, few organizations, if any, can boast of greater service than "The Union of American Hebrew Congregations." Canadian Jewry as yet is not well informed of the splendid achievements of the Union with its branch organizations such as the Brotherhood, Sisterhood and the Hebrew Union College. The month of November will bring some of the leaders of the Union to Canada. We trust they will receive a hearty welcome.

Succoth

This is Succoth week, emphasizing the element of joy. "Thou shalt rejoice" is one of the great commands of our lawgivers. In this respect Judaism differs from other great religions of the world. For the dominant feature of other faiths has been one of sadness. The chief element in Orthodox Christianity is that of sin. Buddahism speaks of the weariness and vanity of life. In Mohammedanism there is the burden of fate. Judaism, however, has always sought to be a religion of joy. May we ever find joy in the observance of Succoth!

Rabbi Isserman's Editorials

Our fathers never grumbled because, as Jews, their difficulties were great. For their faith they gave all, and gave rejoicingly. They left home and wealth, influence and power. They allowed their children to be torn from their arms in order to remain Jews. Many even walked into the torture chambers, and to the inquisitorial rack. They paid with their lives for Judaism and they did not murmur. We are asked so little—but a little of our surplus or a denial of a few luxuries. Ours not to complain, but ours to face the problem. Think of the sacrifice of our ancestors, and then to respond so generously and so wholeheartedly that even as our martyred fathers in their poverty taught the world the meaning of charity, so we, too, may teach our neighbours the true significance of charity.

LEGIONNAIRES ATTEND SERVICE AT SYNAGOGUE

The Great Synagogue in Rue de la Victoire in Paris was the scene of a solemn service on the occasion of the visit of the American Legionnaires in France. Rabbi Dreyfus delivered the sermon and the synagogue was crowded with visitors.

The celebration in connection with the unveiling of a memorial to the Tannenberg battle, which was held in Berlin last Sunday, was somewhat marred by the absence of any Jewish soldiers, who decided to stay away in a body. It seems that representatives of the Jewish, Protestant and Catholic bodies were invited to participate in the services and that one of the addresses was to be delivered by a Rabbi. The anti-Semites, however, insisted that the address of the Rabbi be eliminated and the committee in charge finally agreed to do so. Thereupon the Jewish soldiers decided to abstain from participation in the exercises.

NEW ANTI-SEMITIC CAMPAIGN IN RUMANIA

Renewed activity of the anti-Semitic party in Rumania is pending the return from abroad of Octavian Goga, who was Minister of the Interior in the last Averescu Cabinet. It is said that Goga has entered an agreement with Professor Cuza with a view of uniting all anti-Semitic elements in Rumania in one large body and begin an energetic war against Jews in the early fall.

In a recent issue of the London Spectator, a communication appeared which describes the persecutions leveled against the Baptists by the Rumanian authorities. It is also mentioned there that a movement is on foot now to pass a law refusing admission to the public schools of children belonging to "sectarian" creeds. An order has been issued by the Ministry of Education demanding that all children applying for entrance in school for the coming term must produce a certificate proving that their parents belong to a confession recognized by the State. It is ont known to what extent this order will affect the Jews of Rumania.

Jewish existence. He left the temple and the pulpit. During the war he felt that the spirit bred by the war was out of harmony with the teachings of humanity which he cherished. He became a pacifist. He dedicated his great talents to the cause of teaching the world the true meaning of humanism.

He was an intense Jew. He knew that Jewishness was something significant and vital. He became a Zionist. But he could not content himself with merely preaching Zionism. To him Zionism meant leading a full Jewish life. Zionism teaches that only in Palestine is it possible to completely realize one's Jewish self. He went to Palestine to experience the thrill and joy of self-realization. A true man, genuine idealist, a real Jew—this is Dr. Magnes. It is no wonder that American Jews love him. A.B.B.

COL. WEDGWOOD REPLIES TO MR. GUEDALLA

The warning given by Mr. Guedalla, the President of the English Zionist Federation, at the recent Basle Congress that Jewish criticism against England might cause the British Government to weaken on the Mandate and on the Balfour Declaration, brought forth considerable criticism in England. In a letter to the Jewish Chronicle, Col. Josiah Wedgwood comments on this, seeing the real danger in the present situation a too hasty grant of responsible government to Palestine, made in exasperation, before the western and educated vote is large enough to insure peaceful Jewish development. Proceeding, the Colonel says: "I do not believe, from my experience in America, that the Zionist Movement would be injured if it was made clear that the ultimate goal of Zionism was that Palestine should be a self-governing Dominion within the British Commonwealth. By doing this, you would enlist far more British sympathy, and establish a better atmosphere in Jerusalem. Co-operation is so much more easy when both parties are sure that they want to go in the same direction."

Mr. Amery, the Dominions Secretary, who is visiting South Africa, made a statement in reply to a question by Chief Rabbi Landau of Johannesburg, with regard to England's intentions in Palestine. After enumerating the many difficulties in the way now in Palestine, Mr. Amery made it clear that Great Britain "was still absolutely sincere and loyal in its determination to fulfill in the spirit and the letter the pledges given in Lord Balfour's name in 1917 and repeated again in the Mandate, and conscientiously carried out by everyone who had either held office in the British Government or who had worked in a responsible position in the administration of Palestine."

UKRAINE JEWISH POPULATION

According to the final results of the Ukrainian census of 1926, there are 1,750,332 Jews in Ukraine, which is about 5.8 per cent. of the entire population. Seventy-four per cent. of the Jews live in towns and only 25 per cent. in the villages. The Jewish village population numbers 455,000, of whom 157,300 are agricultural workers, 153,000 are employed on their own farms, and 4,100 are working for others. About 24.6 per cent. of the Jews in the villages are artisans, while only 4 per cent. of the Ukrainian population, 9 per cent. of the Russian and 1.1 per cent. of the Polish are artisans. The Jewish population has the largest proportion of literates in the country. For every thousand of the population, the Jews have 651 literates, the Germans 623, the Poles 601, the Russians 454 and the Ukrainians 283.

Robert Spiegelberg wanted to marry a Christian. For that reason in the first flush of his success in the manufacture of artificial jewelry (more familiarly known as "junk jewelry") he had changed his name to Robert Sparkes and moved from his mother's ornate apartment overlooking the Jewish effulgence of Strauss Park to a bachelor apartment overlooking the parsimonious Christian trees of Gramercy Park. He had always disliked the accented ways of the race to which he belonged; he wished to marry a lean and blonde and subdued young Christian. And he knew only fat and brunette and loud young Jewesses.

His mother, unaware of the real goal of his social ambitions, name querulous remarks now that her son was getting on in money and years.

"Why don't you marry Selma Brinker? Such a refined girl—so well brought up—with such nice real estate in her family—"

Robert Sparkes gently patted Mrs. Spiegelberg's substantial shoulder.

"Now mother, you don't want to lose me entirely, do you? The bachelor apartment is just bad enough."

Inwardly he shuddered at Selma, who had a face that appeared to have been squeezed narrow and pulled out into nose. Since her matriculation at Barnard, she had adopted aggressive sports clothes which he disliked. No—not Selma.

The difficulty, of course, lay in meeting the right Christian girl. When the intimate, exquisitely decorated elevator bore Robert Sparkes up to his Gramercy Park apartment, it took a fish out of his native water. The right people were hidden away all about him and the wrong people telephoned him and invited him to Brooklyn or the Bronx for dinner. Ironically his Christianized temperament did not bring him into Christian society; he lacked the Jewish trait of pushing in everywhere. Most of his time and emotions had been given up to business. In the department stores, in the booth-like shops of Broadway, in the specialty shops of lower Madison Avenue the creations of the De Luxe Jewelry Company sold very well and enriched Robert Spiegelberg-Sparkes, who combined an acute sense of business with an acute sense of the beautiful in brass and paste jewels.

With his social shyness he visited large and correct summer hotels in the Adirondacks, the Berkshires, the Pocono Mountains. His modified name, his inexhaustible purse, his quiet demeanour made him a desirable guest even in the Quaker rectitude of Pocono Manor. But his dignity and pride never plunged him into the gaiety that swirled about young Christian beauties. They went with young Christian boys or the kind of young Jewish boy that will creep into even a Quaker hotel during a dull season—the noisy, curly-haired type with noisy cars and noisy money. Robert Sparkes found himself invariably thrown into the society of school teachers who had reached that age when they did not wish to give up without a struggle. Robert Sparkes was looking for delicacy, not dessication. He therefore warded off their tennis and bridge invitations and rode about the country—in his spotless car or on an equally spotless horse—alone. Often upon these wanderings he would happen upon a kosher boarding house and note with disgust how it swarmed with life. Fat Jewish matrons were cupped in hammocks; children infested the lawn; bedding and bathing suits hung out of the boarding house windows. The flower of Jewish maidenhood summering in that vicinity hung over stone fences and called out to the solitary Robert Sparkes:

"Yoo-hoo! Give us a hitch, Mister?"

And the good-natured chime of their laughter followed his refusal.

Then he would return to his hotel and watch blonde and ethereal young women come down for dinner in summer pastels. He admired their soft voices, their soft manner, the soft texture of their skin behind which the blood seemed to flow gently and delicately. Their chins always had the slight tilt upward, the eyes the condescending droop downward of the upper social crust. The dark, lonely figure of Robert Sparkes attracted them not at all. He wore finical, rimless glasses that caught the light in such a way that the flash of them obscured his eyes; he looked married and dull—except to the school teachers.

He was always more glad than sorry when his vacation time closed and he could return to the inspection of new designs for bangles and ear-rings. He took out a number of young girls approved by his mother. They were always painted in the latest rouge, gowned in the tightest and brightest modes. They laughed loudly at what they liked and gave sarcastic and witty denunciations of any entertainment that did not rise to their level of sophistication. In the homeward-bound taxi they usually kissed him without provocation and generously exhibited their hosiery and garters. He tolerated, even enjoyed them for an evening. But he shuddered bitterly at the thought of marrying one of them. He liked to stroll along lower Park Avenue and watch diaphanous young women step out of limousines into blooded hotels for delicate lunches and teas. The fragility of their faces haunted him. He could never marry Selma Brinker's nose after looking at these faint profiles.

There isn't a country in the world that looks at the Jews and says "Come right on in, you are just what we wanted," but occasionally there appears a Nordic with nose to match who says he would like to be a Jew. Such a one is advertising in "Israel's Messenger," of Shanghai, China, for a high-class Jewish family where he can live and adopt the Jewish faith. He claims to be of quiet habits, a total abstainer and an English gentleman and in spite of all this he will throw over everything Christian for everything Jewish. This makes him an oddity, a rare bird, for there seems to be a depressing lack of people who desire to be Jews. Even the Jews don't always appear so sure they are satisfied and many a one is altering his name from Litvack to Nordic at the very moment this Christian intends to change places. If a Jew wants to become Christian the Christians think this perfectly fitting since the Jewish religion isn't up to so much anyway and will certainly never bring eternal salvation to any one. There seems to be more rejoicing over a Jew converted to Christianity than over a Christian converted to Christianity. But when a Christian longs to become a Jew he gets no encouragement at all. The Jews don't seek or welcome converts and look upon a man as a freak who tries to be one. The Christians have a wonderful religion. Why not try to live up to it? It would be much easier for the Jews everywhere if Christians did and the Jews could do without the compliment of the occasional convert to Judaism. Why does this latest convert intend to apply for standing in his Jewish community? Does he feel sorry for the Jews and yearn to descend from among the world's elect to a place with the despised of the earth? Perhaps, but the commonest explanation is that he has heard the Jews called God's chosen people and wants to be on the safe side with the people of the book.

Professional evangelism, one of the most highly organized industries on this continent, is nearing the end and instead of its calculated commercialism varnished with inspired manifestation there is going to be a substitute called "visitation evangelism." Church leaders among the American Protestants who have been muttering since 1912 against the evangelists say that the old-style professional was a failure as far as permanent benefits to the church were concerned. A man might hit the trail with as much spasm as he could muster, but it might not make any difference; he couldn't be depended upon to stay converted. Several years ago there was a revival meeting in Pittsburgh that cost $90,000, the cost per convert being $28.96, and very few converts permanent. Following this meeting a Methodist minister was heard to call some evangelists grafters and since then many pessimistic churchmen have volunteered opinions equally blighting. Now the Protestant evangelical churches of America are definitely arrayed against expensive, highly-paid stars, their bizarre methods and their whirlwind campaigns for entrants into glory.

The present revolution in evangelism came about because Protestant leaders have discovered after two decades of dealing with sensational exhorters, that the dollar-and-cents enterprise netted dividends too small to the church itself. As a result the forces of the professional evangelists are thinning out and remaining speakers are toning down their slang and acrobatics. Reluctance of the church to back them is cutting down the proceeds which about twelve years ago meant $20,000,000 a year. Each meeting cost a community $3,000 and up with as much as $150,000 for one performance for Billy Sunday. Sunday is said to be the first real financial genius in selling salvation to the people although no apology should be made for Aimée Semple McPherson, who recently agreed to divide about $600,000 with her mother after six years' labour in the vineyard of the Lord. Another force working against the profitable business of professional evangelism is the increasing difficulty in reaching the people in big centres. It must take the heart right out of the enterprising converters who complain now from headquarters of their various organizations against the indifference, the godlessness, the night life, the cabarets, the prevalence of the devil, the bootleggers and the very general thirst for deep sin of this flaming age that has no time or taste for hitting sawdust trails.

So in place of the spectacular experiences which have been of much temporary splendor to millions, there will be the more prosaic blessing of visitation evangelism thought up by the Federal Council of Churches of Christ of America. Campaigns begin next spring in many big eastern centres, including New York City. Visitation evangelism means "personal appeal based upon a survey of the Protestant families of the community by selected committees working under the direction and supervision of men and women who are devoting their lives to the work. The total cost is said to be a fraction of that of the big meeting and its percentage of returns vastly greater and easily calculable." Visitation evangelism does not seek to make proselytes. One of the nicest things about it is that it has nothing to do with the Jews, thank God.

DEAN OF BUDAPEST UNIVERSITY ON RACIAL PURITY

Professor Ludwig Mehely, newly appointed Dean of the University of Budapest, delivered his inaugural address last week, in which he propounded theories that startled both the scientific and the political world. The professor is apparently a great advocate of the purity of race idea and appears to be extremely anxious to preserve the high standard of Magyar red corpuscles, so that they receive no admixture of any blood that might be of inferior character. In fact, he discovered adevice whereby race affiliation may easily be determined by a blood test, so that it will be impossible for one to claim relationship with superior races, unless he is actually free from any taint of foreign blood. Of course, his thesis was aimed primarily against the inferior Jewish race and, stepping out from the sphere of pure science, the worthy professor enters the arena of politics and urges the introduction of some law that would limit the inter-marriage between Jews and Magyars.

The fact that Count Klebelsberg, the Hungarian Minister of Education, was present at the inauguration and was an attentive listener without making any protest, has caused bitter resentment among the Jews of Hungary.

SHEA'S

For several years Billy House endeared himself to vaudeville patrons in his skit "Oh, Teddy" and once more he returns to the Keith-Albee Big Time circuit in a new act called "Resolutions." The act opens with Billy bidding goodbye to his wife at the railway station. She is about to visit her mother and Billy assures her that he will count the days until she returns. The wife's unexpected return home as Billy is entertaining a theatrical troupe creates many laughable situations. Zelda Santley, known to vaudeville as "Little Miss Everybody," will offer some novel lyric caricatures.

BIG DEVELOPMENTS FOR TORONTO HARBOUR; RAPID CHANGES SOUTH OF FRONT STREET

New Union Station, Canadian Pacific Railway Hotel, and Several Other Projects of Major Importance are Bringing This Section of the Queen City Into Prominence—Whole District is Being Changed as Improvements are Carried Out.

Business in Toronto is moving towards the waterfront. This tendency became apparent soon after the reclamation of Ashbridge's Bay, but it has gained tremendous impetus since the extensive water area between the foot of Yonge Street and the Humber River was reclaimed. A premium was placed on the section between Yonge and Bathurst Streets, because it was at once recognized as the choicest site for commercial undertakings, not only in Toronto, but in the Province of Ontario. Big enterprises have located there, because it is central, being in close proximity to the heart of the city, and because lake and rail transportation facilities are probably unsurpassed.

Facing the waterfront and on higher ground, with a commanding view of bay and lake is part of the area which twenty-three years ago was swept by fire. New structures have risen along Front Street, or are now under way that promise to make it the most impoeing business street in the city. It is fitting that this should be so, because this thoroughfare is the "front door" of Toronto. To one who has not visited the city for a decade, the transformation that has taken place must appear miraculous.

Not long ago Front Street was the deadline. The then existing narrow strip between it and the wharves was occupied almost exclusively by railway tracks and yards. Level crossings rendered it hazardous for pedestrians and difficult for vehicular traffic. Already, the waterfront has been made readily accessible to the people and when the work of the Toronto Harbour Commission and the railways, now well under way, is completed, the section south of the tracks will grow still more rapidly than it has in the recent past as a centre of commercial activity.

The conception of the Harbour scheme, was an inspiration, came at an opportune time. The new Union Station was under way, the Viaduct, which has linked up the water front with the city as one individual unit was under consideration. Toronto, with its population of close to three-quarters of a million was in urgent need of greater harbour facilities. Furthermore, as the distributing centre for the most populous and prosperous province of the Dominion, Toronto was called upon to supply in large measure the commodity requirements of some 3,000,000 people. All these important interests, including the railways, were able to develop in unison a co-operative scheme, which was destined to contribute to the benefit of the commercial interests of the city and province.

Last week the first passenger train traversed the viaduct. The Union Station is now in operation. Traffic moves north and south without interference or delay. The Bay Street driveway, leading into Bay and Yonge Streets, has become one of the main arteries of the city. Deliveries by boat and rail have been speeded up. The most modern facilities for movements of freight and for warehousing have been furnished. Demolition of buildings on the site, opposite the Union Station for the new C.P.R. hotel, which will be the largest and finest in the Dominion is under way. These are some of the reasons why the business and financial interests of Toronto are moving south. Toronto's new "front door" promises to be one of the finest of any city on the continent, and one of the busiest.

When the Toronto Harbour Commission laid down its plans, the work was to cost some $[illegible],000. This was a considerable sum, but, probably, it was the most profitable investment the city ever made. Not only did it involve the reclamation of a large area to add to the city's overcrowded and most valuable downtown district, but the deepening of the channels and approaches, so that the largest vessels sailing the lakes hereafter may load and unload at the long line of piers that extend from one end of the bay to the other. Ships drawing thirty feet of water will be able to make the harbour and discharge their cargoes.

Of the new enterprises that have located in the reclaimed area along the water front, one of the most important is Canadian Rail and Harbour Terminals, Limited, which has built a warehouse with a capacity of 1,000,000 square feet, including 250,000 square feet of cold storage. Exhibition Park, the Maple Leaf Baseball Stadium, and the new Canada Steamship Lines docks costing around $1,500,000 at the foot of Bay Street, are important factors in attracting the public. Recent announcements that several big industrial and commercial enterprises would locate in the Harbour area further demonstrate the trend of events. Loblaw Groceterias Co., Ltd., is building a $800,000 warehouse, while the Dominion Envelope and Carton Co. and the Canadian Paperboard Company have signified their intention of erecting large plants along the water front.

THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS EXPOSITION AND STYLE REVIEW

which is being sponsored by the Hadassah Council of Toronto, to be conducted at the Coliseum November 2, promises to be the biggest event of the year. The affair this year will be on a much larger scale than anything ever before staged by Hadassah. The committees in charge report that the local merchants and manufacturers are responding to the affair by taking booth space in which they will exhibit their merchandise. Such features as the style review, baby contest, dancing and entertainment will be part of the programme in addition to the display booths. The Coliseum is being transformed into a splendour of decoration and lighting effects for the affair. Every effort is being made to give a unique day's entertainment. Aside from the local merchants who are taking part, many of the largest manufacturers in Canada will have their merchandise on display.

Street car transportation facilities have been arranged for whereby street cars will be run direct to the main entrance of the Coliseum. Parking space will be free. Tickets for the event can now be purchased through any member of the Hadassah or at the Zionist Building.

THE BABY CONTEST

which is being run in conjunction with the League of Nations Exposition and Style Review at the Coliseum on Wednesday, November 2, has started keen rivalry among the parents of the many babies which have already been entered in this contest. Dr. Alan Brown, who will act as judge, expresses his opinion that this will undoubtedly bring out Toronto's physically perfect chid. Any child, between the ages of six months to six years, is eligible in this contest. Entry can be made through any member of the Hadassah or at the Zionist Building, the fee being one dollar.
